CONTENT STRATEGY

GIFT OGIDI

Content Strategist for brand owners & service-based businesses

Portfolio & Body of Work, 2026

ABOUT

Strategy first. Content second.

I build content systems, not just posts, so brands earn attention consistently instead of chasing it one video at a time.

BACKGROUND

Mass Communication graduate; multi-venture entrepreneur across content strategy, content creation, public relations and ESL education.

FOCUS

Short-form video strategy (TikTok, Instagram, Facebook) for brand owners and service-based businesses

METHOD

Modular hook-and-bullet frameworks over word-for-word scripts, built for creators and teams to actually execute

PROOF OF WORK

Designed, documented, and shipped full content systems: calendars, hook libraries, and productized templates, shown on the following pages

MY APPROACH

Trust before the sell

01

Diagnose

Audit the niche, audience psychology, and what's actually stopping the brand from being believed.

02

Systemize

Build a repeatable content architecture: recurring series, hook banks, and posting cadence, not one-off ideas.

03

Sequence

Sell nothing at first. Earn authority through value-first content, then layer offers once trust is established.

04

Scale

Test organic performance before spending, then boost only proven posts with a conversion objective.

CASE STUDY · CONTENT SYSTEM

120-Day Trust-Building Content Calendar

A no-selling, no-product-mention content system designed to build authority and trust before any offer is introduced.

Day	Time	Hook	Video Format	Series
1	Morning	Nobody's going to tell you this, so I will: "Post every day" is the myth killing your consistency.	Talking-head to camera	Marketing Myths
1	Afternoon	Stop scrolling — what a hook actually is (most people get this wrong). Most people never hear this.	Text-overlay voiceover	One Minute Marketing School
1	Evening	You've been told the opposite of this your whole life: the psychology behind the Save button.	Green-screen with B-roll	Content Psychology
2	Morning	I used to believe the opposite of this: why Apple rarely explains what a feature actually does.	Split-screen comparison	Why This Works
2	Afternoon	Here's the thing nobody explains about this: starting every video with "Hey guys".	Whiteboard / screen-record explainer	Creator Mistakes
2	Evening	If you've ever wondered why some content just works — the real reason brands use mascots.	POV storytelling	Brand Secrets
3	Morning	This is the post I wish someone had shown me years ago: the 3-post content loop that quietly builds authority.	Stitch / duet reaction style	Steal This Strategy
3	Afternoon	Everyone's doing this wrong, and here's the proof: consistency is overrated — relevance isn't.	Slideshow with bold captions	Hot Takes
3	Evening	This took me way too long to figure out: what AI can write for you — and what it shouldn't.	Talking-head to camera	AI vs Human Marketing
4	Morning	Save this before it disappears from your feed: breaking down the headline that helped sell out a $2,000 course.	Text-overlay voiceover	Copywriting Breakdowns
4	Afternoon	The thing that separates beginners from pros is this: why people buy emotionally, then justify it logically.	Green-screen with B-roll	Consumer Psychology
4	Evening	You're going to want to rewatch this one: why every story needs a villain, even if it's just an idea.	Split-screen comparison	Storytelling Secrets
5	Morning	Nobody's going to tell you this, so I will: more followers automatically means more customers.	Whiteboard / screen-record explainer	Marketing Myths
5	Afternoon	Stop scrolling — the 3-second rule, explained properly. Most people never hear this.	POV storytelling	One Minute Marketing School
5	Evening	You've been told the opposite of this your whole life: why boring content spreads faster than entertaining content.	Stitch / duet reaction style	Content Psychology

16-Week TikTok Content Calendar

A structured, weekly-themed posting system built for consistency: three posts a day, mapped to rotating themes rather than improvised daily.

16

WEEKS STRUCTURED

Full quarter-plus of coverage planned in advance, not improvised day to day

3x

POSTS PER DAY

A daily cadence built for algorithmic consistency without creative burnout

1

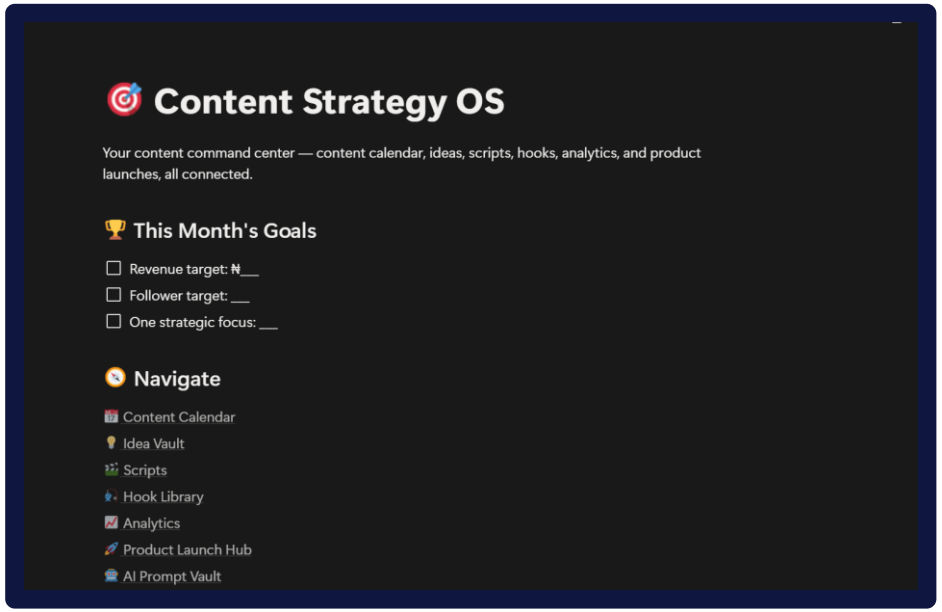

WEEKLY THEME SYSTEM

Each week anchored to a theme so content stays cohesive, not scattered

Content Strategy Operating System

A 9-database Notion workspace I built to run my own content operations, then packaged and sold as a product: content calendar, idea vault, scripts, hook library, analytics, and product launch hub, all connected.

Social Media Content Strategy Template

A guided, fillable Word document that walks a business owner from defining real outcomes to a sustainable weekly publishing rhythm.

Section 1 — Outcome-Oriented Foundation

Every decision later in this document (which platform, what to post, how often, what to track) flows from what you define here. If you only complete one section properly, make it this one.

1.1 — Define what success actually means

Vanity metrics (followers, likes, views) feel good but rarely pay bills. Start by naming the real business outcome social media needs to serve right now.

Business Goal	How Social Media Serves It	Example
Revenue growth	Direct sales via shoppable posts, link-in-bio, DMs converting to orders	E-commerce brand driving checkout traffic from Reels
Lead generation	Inquiries, bookings, form fills, DM conversations that become clients	Service business booking consults from carousel posts
Authority / trust	Positioning as the go-to expert so people choose you when ready to buy	Consultant building credibility before a launch
Community / retention	Keeping existing customers engaged, reducing churn, building loyalty	Membership brand nurturing an existing audience
Talent / partnerships	Attracting collaborators, sponsors, hires, or investors	Creator building a personal brand for brand deals

Your turn — rank your top 2 goals for the next 90 days

Primary goal:

Secondary goal:

Resist the urge to pick four goals. Two is enough to focus content decisions; five means you'll optimize for none of them.

1.2 — The three questions that force real strategy

Who are we reaching? Not "everyone interested in [industry]." A specific person, at a specific stage, with a specific problem.

Who:

Why should they care? What do you offer that they can't get from the next ten accounts in their feed?

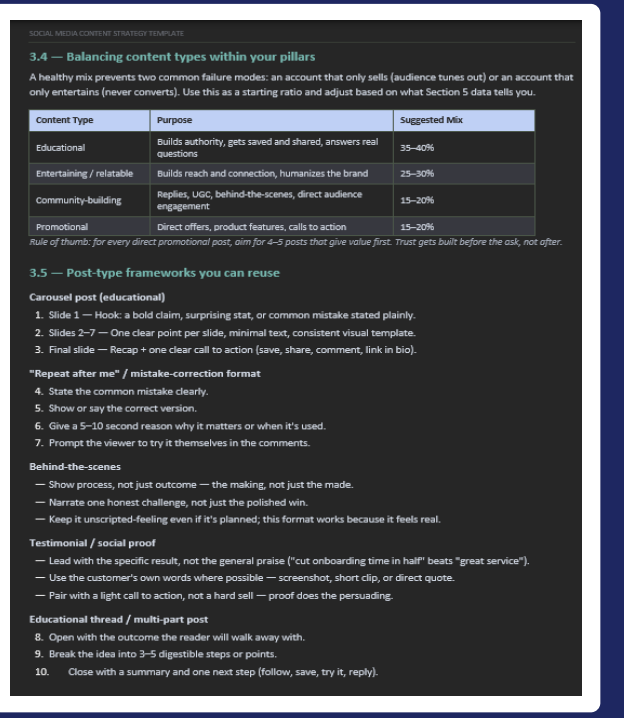

Why:

What's the one thing we want them to do? Not five things — one primary action per platform (e.g., DM us, click the link, save the post, book a call).

One action:

Section 1: Outcome-Oriented Foundation

Ties every content decision to a real business goal, not vanity metrics

SOCIAL MEDIA CONTENT STRATEGY TEMPLATE

3.4 — Balancing content types within your pillars

A healthy mix prevents two common failure modes: an account that only sells (audience tunes out) or an account that only entertains (never converts). Use this as a starting ratio and adjust based on what Section 5 data tells you.

Content Type	Purpose	Suggested Mix
Educational	Builds authority, gets saved and shared, answers real questions	35–40%
Entertaining / relatable	Builds reach and connection, humanizes the brand	25–30%
Community-building	Replies, UGC, behind-the-scenes, direct audience engagement	15–20%
Promotional	Direct offers, product features, calls to action	15–20%

Rule of thumb: for every direct promotional post, aim for 4–5 posts that give value first. Trust gets built before the ask, not after.

3.5 — Post-type frameworks you can reuse

Carousel post (educational)

1. Slide 1 — Hook: a bold claim, surprising stat, or common mistake stated plainly.
2. Slides 2–7 — One clear point per slide, minimal text, consistent visual template.
3. Final slide — Recap + one clear call to action (save, share, comment, link in bio).

"Repeat after me" / mistake-correction format

4. State the common mistake clearly.
5. Show or say the correct version.
6. Give a 5–10 second reason why it matters or when it's used.
7. Prompt the viewer to try it themselves in the comments.

Behind-the-scenes

— Show process, not just outcome — the making, not just the made.
— Narrate one honest challenge, not just the polished win.
— Keep it unscripted-feeling even if it's planned; this format works because it feels real.

Testimonial / social proof

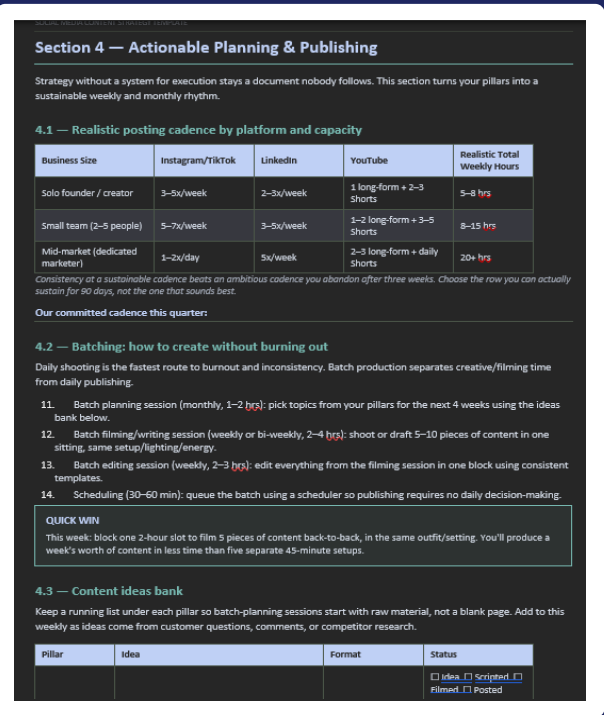

— Lead with the specific result, not the general praise ("cut onboarding time in half" beats "great service").
— Use the customer's own words where possible — screenshot, short clip, or direct quote.
— Pair with a light call to action, not a hard sell — proof does the persuading.

Educational thread / multi-part post

8. Open with the outcome the reader will walk away with.
9. Break the idea into 3–5 digestible steps or points.
10. Close with a summary and one next step (follow, save, try it, reply).

Section 3.4: Balancing Content Types

A reusable ratio for educational, entertaining, community, and promotional posts

Section 4 — Actionable Planning & Publishing

Strategy without a system for execution stays a document nobody follows. This section turns your pillars into a sustainable weekly and monthly rhythm.

4.1 — Realistic posting cadence by platform and capacity

Business Size	Instagram/TikTok	LinkedIn	YouTube	Realistic Total Weekly Hours
Solo founder / creator	3–5x/week	2–3x/week	1 long-form + 2–3 Shorts	5–8 hrs
Small team (2–5 people)	5–7x/week	3–5x/week	1–2 long-form + 3–5 Shorts	8–15 hrs
Mid-market (dedicated marketer)	1–2x/day	5x/week	2–3 long-form + daily Shorts	20+ hrs

Consistency at a sustainable cadence beats an ambitious cadence you abandon after three weeks. Choose the row you can actually sustain for 90 days, not the one that sounds best.

Our committed cadence this quarter:

4.2 — Batching: how to create without burning out

Daily shooting is the fastest route to burnout and inconsistency. Batch production separates creative/filming time from daily publishing.

11. Batch planning session (monthly, 1–2 hrs): pick topics from your pillars for the next 4 weeks using the ideas bank below.
12. Batch filming/writing session (weekly or bi-weekly, 2–4 hrs): shoot or draft 5–10 pieces of content in one sitting, same setup/lighting/energy.
13. Batch editing session (weekly, 2–3 hrs): edit everything from the filming session in one block using consistent templates.
14. Scheduling (30–60 min): queue the batch using a scheduler so publishing requires no daily decision-making.

QUICK WIN

This week: block one 2-hour slot to film 5 pieces of content back-to-back, in the same outfit/setting. You'll produce a week's worth of content in less time than five separate 45-minute setups.

4.3 — Content ideas bank

Keep a running list under each pillar so batch-planning sessions start with raw material, not a blank page. Add to this weekly as ideas come from customer questions, comments, or competitor research.

Pillar	Idea	Format	Status
			☐ Idea ☐ Scripted ☐ Filmed ☐ Posted

Section 4: Actionable Planning

Realistic posting cadence by business size, plus a batching system to avoid burnout

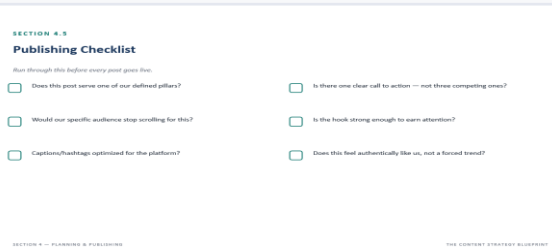

The Content Strategy Blueprint

A visual, presentation-style strategy document, built for brand owners who want the plan and the measurement system in one place.

Content Mix Breakdown

A visual ratio (with live chart) for balancing what gets posted

Publishing Checklist

Six checks every post runs through before it goes live

Quarterly Review Process

What to measure, what to ask, and how to adjust each quarter

CASE STUDY · DECISION FRAMEWORK

Organic First, Then Boost What Works

A test-before-spend framework built to stop early-stage accounts from becoming dependent on paid growth before organic performance is proven.

1 Post organically → 2 Identify top performers → 3 Boost proven posts only → 4 Use a conversion objective

Why it matters: protects ad budget, keeps growth attributable to content quality, and avoids the trap of paying to mask weak organic performance.

SKILLS

What I bring to a content team

Content Systems

Recurring series, hook libraries, and calendars built for months of consistent output

Short-Form Strategy

Talking-head & text-overlay scripting for TikTok, Reels, and Instagram

Audience Psychology

Positioning brands around what audiences actually believe and want

Paid Media Discipline

Organic-first testing before ad spend, with conversion-focused boosting

Productization

Packaging strategy into templates and toolkits others can self-serve

Cross-Format Delivery
